

Plate 1

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

General view of the house and park from the north. The site for the present development is to the right of the mansion behind the woodland.

(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 2

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

The area of woodland, part of Fitz Woods, that contains the site of the Romano-British farmstead which is a Scheduled Ancient Monument.

(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 3

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

A section of the defensive outer bank ditch and inner bank on the northern side of the enclosure of the Romano-British farmstead. (Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 4

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

A section of the defensive inner bank, ditch and outer bank on the southern side of the enclosure of the Romano-British farmstead. (Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 5
The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria
The northern or front elevation to the Georgian mansion house.
(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 6
The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria
The date stone of 1665 recording Patricius and Elizabeth Senhouse, now sited above a rear entrance to the Georgian mansion house.
(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 7

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

The trees of Fitz wood showing the original ground level on the north-eastern side of Area A1 and the slope of the made ground rising to the right of the photograph.

(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 8

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

Looking north-west towards the sewage works from the made ground of Area A1, with the lower ground of Area A2 in the middle distance.

(Photograph : P. Cracknell)

Plate 9

The Fitz, Fitz Park, Cockermouth, Cumbria

Looking north towards the line of the B5292, Low Road, from the made ground of Area A1, with the lower ground of Area A2 in the middle Distance.

(Photograph : P. Cracknell)